Holiday Performance at Hedgerow Monday Tuesday. Conducted by Saul Caston

Annual Presentation of "Inheritors" Will be Given at Matinee

It has been a sentimental tradition for Hedgerow Theatre at Moylan-Rose Valley to celebrate the Fourth of July with a matinee performance of Susan Glaspell's "Inheritors." This year's performance will be given Monday at 2.30 P. M.

Its compelling story of the threegeneration struggle of a mid-western family with its tale of perseverance, foresight and hardships closely parallel the beginnings of Hedgerow itself.

Andre Obey's "Noah," introduced to the repertory this past spring, will be shown Monday night. The play, packed with a kindly philosophy, views with gentle irony post-flood mankind, wondering if improvement has been made over the pre-flood breed.

Molnar's "Liliom," which will play Wednesday, will present Miriam Phillips as the docile servant girl with Joseph Taulane, who is back from a winter on the New York stage, as the cocky circus-barker husband.

Tonight, Lennon Robinson's "The Round Table" will be given with Obey's "Neah" tomorrow night.

Editor, Our Town:

Miss Montgomery.

I am taking this opportunity to express my feelings toward one of our holiest days-the Fourth of July. Every year, at this particular time my thoughts start wandering around the entire world, in an effort to compare our country with others.
